Date : 20/06/2024
ORAL JUDGMENT
(PER : HONOURABLE MR. JUSTICE VIMAL K. VYAS)

1. The present petition is directed against the order of detention dated 25.01.2024 passed by the respondent – detaining authority in exercise of powers conferred under Section

3(1) of the Gujarat Prevention of Anti-Social Activities Act, 1985 (for short, 'the Act') by detaining the petitioner – detenue as defined under Section 2(b) of the Act.

2. Heard learned advocate appearing for the petitioner – detenue and learned APP appearing for the respondent – State.

3. Learned advocate for the petitioner - detenue submits that the impugned order of detention is required to be quashed and set-aside since the detaining authority has passed the order of detention solely on the ground of registration of two FIRs for the offences under Sections 65(a)(e), 81, 83, 98(2) and 98(3) of the Prohibition Act and that by itself cannot bring the case of the petitioner - detenue within the purview of definition under Section 2(b) of the Act. Learned advocate for the petitioner further submitted that the illegal activities likely alleged to have been carried out or likely to be carried out, as alleged, cannot have any nexus or bearing with the maintenance of public order and at the most, it can be said to be a breach of law and order. Further, except the statement of the witnesses and the registration of above FIRs, no other relevant and cogent material is on record which would show that the alleged anti-social activity of the petitioner - detenue fall under the category of breach of public order. Learned advocate further submitted that it is not possible to hold, on the basis of the facts of the present case, that the activity of the petitioner - detenue with respect to the criminal case had affected and disturbed the social fabric of the society, eventually which would become threat to the very existence of the normal and routine life of the people at large or that on the basis of the registration of criminal case, the petitioner - detenue had put the entire social apparatus in disorder, making it difficult for the whole system to exist, as a system governed by rule of law, by disturbing the public order.

4. Learned APP for the respondent - State has supported the detention order passed by the detaining authority and has submitted that sufficient materials and evidences were found during the course of investigation and the same were also supplied to the petitioner – detenue, which indicate that the petitioner - detenue is in the habit of indulging into activities as defined under Section 2(b) of the Act and considering the facts of the case, the detaining authority has rightly passed the order of detention and the same deserves to be upheld by this Court.

5. Having heard the learned advocates appearing for the respective parties and considering the documents and materials available on record, prima facie, it is found that the subjective satisfaction arrived at by the detaining authority cannot be said to be legal, valid and in accordance with law, inasmuch as the offences alleged in the FIRs cannot have any bearing on the public order as required under the Act and other relevant penal laws are sufficient enough to take care of the situation and that the allegations levelled against the petitioner - detenue cannot be said to be germane for the purpose of bringing the petitioner - detenue within the realm of the meaning of Section 2(b) of the Act. Unless and until there is some material to make out a case that the person has become a threat and menace to the society so as to disturb the whole tempo of the society and that all social apparatus goes in peril, disturbing the public order at the instance of such person, in that circumstances, it cannot be said that the detenue is a person which would fall within the category under Section 2(b) of the Act. Except the general statement, there is no other material on record which shows that the petitioner - detenue has acted in such a manner which has become dangerous to the public order.

6. At this juncture, we would like to put reliance upon certain case-laws of the Apex Court, wherein the Apex Court has crystalized the position of law.

6.1 In a recent decision of the Apex Court rendered in the case of Shaik Nazneen vs. The State of Telanga and others and Syed Sabeena vs. The State of Telangana and others, reported in (2023)9 SCC 633, the Apex Court has made the following observations in paragraphs Nos.17 and 18, which read thus :

> "17. In any case, the State is not without a remedy, as in case the detenu is much a menace to the society as is being alleged, then the prosecution should seek for the cancellation of his bail and/or move an appeal to the Higher Court. But definitely seeking shelter under the preventive detention law is not the proper remedy under the facts and circumstances of the case.
> 18. In fact, in a recent decision of this Court, the Court had to make an observation regarding the routine and unjustified use of the Preventive Detention Law in the State of Telangana. This has been done in the case of Mallada K. Sri Ram vs. The State of Telangana & Ors. 2022 6 SCALE 50, it was stated as under :
> "17. It is also relevant to note, that in the last five years, this Court has quashed over five detention orders under the Telangana Act of 1986 for inter alia incorrectly applying the standard for maintenance of public order and relying on stale materials while passing the orders of detention. At least ten detention orders under the Telangana Act of 1986 have been set aside by the High Court of Telangana in the last one year itself. These numbers evince a callous exercise of the exceptional power of preventive detention by the detaining authorities and the respondent-state. We direct the respondents to take stock of challenges to detention orders pending before the Advisory Board, High Court and Apex Court and evaluate the fairness of the detention order against lawful standards.""

6.2 The distinction between disturbance to 'law and order' and disturbance to 'public order' has been clearly settled by a Constitution Bench in the case of Dr. Ram Manohar Lohia vs. State of Bihar, reported in AIR 1966 SC 740. The Apex Court has held that every disorder does not meet the threshold of disturbance to public order unless it affects the community at large. The Constitution Bench held thus :

"51. We have here a case of detention under Rule 30 of the Defence of India Rules which permits apprehension and detention of a person likely to act in a manner prejudicial to the maintenance of public order. It follows that if such a person is not detained public disorder is the apprehended result. Disorder is no doubt prevented by the maintenance of law and order also but disorder is a broad spectrum which includes at one end small disturbances and at the other the most serious and cataclysmic happenings. Does the expression 'public order' take in every kind of disorders or only some of them ? The answer to this serves to distinguish 'public order' from 'law and order' because the latter undoubtedly takes in all of them. Public order if disturbed, must lead to public disorder. Every breach of the peace does not lead to public disorder. When two drunkards quarrel and fight there is disorder but not public disorder. They can be dealt with under the powers to maintain law and order but cannot be detained on the ground that they were disturbing public order. Suppose that the two fighters were of rival communities and one of them tried to raise communal passions. The problem is still one of law and order but it raises the apprehension of public disorder. Other examples can be imagined. The contravention of law always affects order but before if can be said to affect public order, it must affect the community or the public at large. A mere disturbance of law and order leading to disorder is thus not necessarily sufficient for action under the Defence of India Act but disturbances which subvert the public order are. A District Magistrate is entitled to take action under Rule 30(1) (b) to prevent subversion of public order but not in aid of maintenance of law and order under ordinary circumstances.

52. It will thus appear that just as 'public order' in the rulings of this Court (earlier cited) was said to comprehend disorders of less gravity than those affecting 'security of State', 'law and order' also comprehends disorders of less gravity than those affecting 'public order'. One has to imagine three concentric circles. Law and order represents the largest circle within which is the next circle representing public order and the smallest circle represents security of State. It is then easy to see that an act may affect law and order but not public order just as an act may affect public order but not security of the State. By using the expression 'maintenance of law and order' the District Magistrate was widening his own field of action and was adding a clause to the Defence of India Rules."

6.3 In the case of Mallada K. Sri Ram vs. The State of Telangana, reported in (2023)13 SCC 537, the Apex Court has observed as under :

"15. A mere apprehension of a breach of law and order is not sufficient to meet the standard of adversely affecting the 'maintenance of public order'. In this case, the apprehension of a disturbance to public order owing to a crime that was reported over seven months prior to the detention order has no basis in fact. The apprehension of an adverse impact to public order is a mere surmise of the detaining authority, especially when there have been no reports of unrest since detenu was released on bail on 8 January 2021 and detained with effect from 26 June 2021. The nature of the allegations against the detenu are grave. However, the personal liberty of an accused cannot be sacrificed on the altar of preventive detention merely because a person is implicated in a criminal proceeding. The powers of preventive detention are exceptional and even draconian. Tracing their origin to the colonial era, they have been continued with strict constitutional safeguards against abuse. Article 22 the Constitution was specifically inserted and extensively debated in the Constituent Assembly to ensure that the exceptional powers of preventive detention do not devolve into a draconian and arbitrary exercise of state authority. The case at hand is a clear example of non-application of mind to material circumstances having a bearing on the subjective satisfaction of the detaining authority. The two FIRs which were registered against the detenu are capable of being dealt by the ordinary course of criminal law."

6.4 It will be fruitful to refer to a decision of the Apex Court in the case of Pushkar Mukherjee and others vs. The State of West Bengal, reported in AIR 1970 SC 852, where the distinction between 'law and order' and 'public order' has been clearly laid down. The Court observed as follows :

"Does the expression 'public order' take in every kind of infraction of order or only some categories thereof ? It is manifest that every act of assault or injury to specific persons does not lead to public disorder. When two people quarrel and fight and assault each other inside a house or in a street, it may be said that there is disorder but not public disorder. Such cases are dealt with under the powers vested in the executive authorities under the provisions of ordinary criminal law but the culprits cannot be detained on the ground that they were disturbing public order. The contravention of any law always affects order but before it can be said to affect public order, it must affect the community or the public at large. In this connection we must draw a line of demarcation between serious and aggravated forms of disorder which directly affect the community or injure the public interest and the relatively minor breaches of peace of a purely local significance which primarily injure specific individuals and only in a secondary sense public interest. A mere disturbance of law and order leading to disorder is thus not necessarily sufficient for action under the Preventive Detention Act but a disturbance which will affect public order comes within the scope of the Act."

7. In view of the above, we are inclined to allow this petition, because simplicitor registration of FIRs by itself cannot have any nexus with the breach of maintenance of public order and the authority cannot have recourse under the Act and no other relevant and cogent material exists for invoking the power under Section 3(1) of the Act.

8. In the result, the present petition is allowed and the impugned order of detention dated 25.01.2024 passed by the respondent – detaining authority is hereby quashed and set-aside. The petitioner - detenue is ordered to be set at liberty forthwith, if not required in any other case. Rule made absolute to the aforesaid extent. Direct service is permitted.
